Brief description of project

Ownership/Copyright

The Ohio State University retains the copyright for any material developed as a result of work-for-hire. The author is required to attach a list of items used in this project that are owned by another entity, along with the permissions granted for each use. Also required is a list of any items that were produced by the author that are not a result of the work-for-hire. Any work performed by Marketing and Communications is the property of Marketing and Communications.

Proof Policy

Marketing and Communications will deliver to the author a concept, first and second proof. A final proof will be provided after all changes have been incorporated. A printer's proof will be provided after the publication goes to press. Changes made by the author at final or printer's proof stage could severely impact the production schedule.

Signatures

These signatures verify that the submitted publication has been peer reviewed and approved following procedures established by the author's department. By signing, you acknowledge the terms of the Ownership/Copyright and Proof Policy sections of this form.
